Building Successful Futures • Each Student • Every Day

CHALLENGE

After implementing Zonar System's Z-Pass solution for student ridership tracking, Park Hill School District was challenged with finding a RFID card that would work with their new bus tracking solution and their existing school applications.

Park Hill's main goal was improving the safety and security of student transportation with a system that would provide school administrators and parents the time, date and location of when a child entered and exited the bus.

With a well-constructed system already in place for their library, food services and tracking applications across the District, it was imperative that one student ID card could be used for the new and existing programs. The school had a tight deadline between when student information would be made available and when the new cards needed to be printed and distributed to school sites.

DID YOU KNOW?

Card printers are available with built-in technology so you can enroll and print your RFID bus passes in one step?

SOLUTION

To further understand Park Hill's specific requirements, Zonar asked CI Solutions to meet with the school. They reviewed Park Hill's process for taking pictures, enrolling RFID numbers and personalizing ID cards for each student.

Park Hill was concerned that introducing a dual-technology card would create even more headaches for an already labor intensive card production process.

After CI Solutions completed their initial Card Process Optimization (CPO) with the District, it was discovered that the task of printing and issuing new ID cards would be better managed by CI Solutions in-house Print Services Team. By using CI Solutions for card design, RFID programming and printing, Park Hill was able to focus their attention on the start of the new school year.

Together with Zonar Systems and Park Hill School District's IT Department, CI Solutions successfully introduced one card that could be used for student ridership tracking and serve the existing applications on campus.
